INTRODUCTION

The papers and ledgers which form the subject of this volume originally came from Castleboro, Co. Wexford, and consequently their contents relate mainly to affairs connected with that branch of the Carew family whose principal seat in the 18th century was at Castleboro. But the material is by no means a complete, or even partially complete, family collection. In fact it only represents such fragments as were very fortunately purchased by Mr. Kelly of Kilpierce. Enniscorthy, at an auction at Castleboro, and thus saved from destruction when the place was shortly afterwards burned in 1922. Later the material was obtained for the Record Office in Dublin, through the good offices of the late Senator Miss Kathleen Browne of Rathronan Castle, Co. Wexford.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the material is somewhat miscellaneous in character, and though this does not of itself detract from the value of the information to be found therein, it does, especially in some instances, take from the sense of continuity. For the sake of convenience a classification into three groups has been adopted :— I. Rentals ; II. Accounts ; III. Miscellaneous—with a few introductory notes to each section. It may, however, be remarked here, that although the four books of rentals are not continuous, they are sufficiently connected to give some idea of the holdings on the Co. Wexford and Waterford estates between 1740–1830, whilst the volume of accounts provides information on household and other expenses over the shorter, but continuous period 1746–82. Both the earliest and latest documents occur in the last section and though these range from a memorandum book c. 1675–1725, to receipts and correspondence of the early 19th century, they form, on the whole, the least interesting part of the collection.

It is hoped that the accompanying pedigree will help to identify some of the principal persons mentioned throughout these papers, and for that reason the confusing ramifications of the family tree in Co. Waterford, Co. Tipperary, etc., have been omitted. Little is known of the first Robert Carew mentioned in the pedigree, save that he was, of course, of Welsh extraction, settled in Ireland, and died about 1673. In any case it was his son, the second Robert who appears to have been the real founder of the family's landed estates. Thus by patent dated 9 Feb., 1668[1] he acquired considerable grants of land in the Cos. of Tipperary and Fermanagh as well as some 890 acres in Co. Waterford, about 1600 acres in Co. Wexford and various holdings amounting to just over 184 acres in the City of Waterford. It was probably to round off these areas in Co. Wexford, i.e., Chapel, Raheen, Tomfarney, Clonroche and Ballymackesy—all in the Barony of Bantry—that he purchased Castleboro from William Leigh in 1669, and other lands from Andrew Ram in 1679 and from Samuel Hughes in 1680. Moreover, by his marriage with Anne, daughter of Andrew Lynn, who, under the Act of Settlement, was a Patentee, of Ballinamona and other lands in Co. Waterford, yet more property devolved for the establishment of younger sons—for example his second son Andrew, and later his grandson Thomas. All his six daughters were, apparently, successfully married, but it was his eldest son, the third Robert of the pedigree, born in 1680, who advanced the family fortunes yet further. Thus in 1710, two years after his father's death, he married Elizabeth Shapland, daughter and co-heir with her two married sisters, of the wealthy Wexford merchant, John Shapland, and his wife Ellen Bond, and the frequent use of the name Shapland in the Carew family dates from this alliance. Robert, however, died in 1721, so that it is his widow and son who are mentioned so often in the accounts. Incidentally it is almost impossible to ascertain the exact extent of Elizabeth's reputed fortune, though there is no doubt that it included estates in Co. Waterford and Co. Wexford, as well as much personal property. Indeed, some of the most explicit information both about this, and about her later life, comes, not from these papers, but from a document dated April, 1729, and preserved in the Registry of Deeds in Dublin. From this "Memorial"[2] of complicated deeds of lease and release it is clear that in 1729 she married again, her second husband being a certain John Mutlow of Woodstown, near Passage, on the coast of Co. Waterford, and this explains the otherwise obscure references to Mrs. Elizabeth Mutlow in the household accounts. As the rents from certain lands in Co. Waterford—Woodstown, Knockavelish, Harristown, etc.—were preserved to her use in case of John Mutlow's death, and were only to go to the younger Carew sons in default of Mutlow heirs, it may be presumed that they were not originally Carew lands. Moreover the deed cites her right to the guardianship and management of the estate and fortune of her late husband, Robert Carew, during the minority of his heirs, as well as her rights to the effects and chattels, both real and personal, of her mother, Ellen Shapland, for whom she was the executrix. Finally the deed emphasises, in no uncertain language that she retained full power to assign the trust moneys arising out of her share of her mother's estate without interference from John Mutlow, or any one else! Nothing more is heard of the said John Mutlow, nor were there any children of this second marriage, but Elizabeth seems to have divided her time between Woodstown[3] and Castleboro, and according to the Index to the Prerogative Wills of Ireland her death did not take place till the year 1765.

Of Elizabeth's eldest son—the fourth Robert Carew of the pedigree—there is little to be said, for he died in 1740, in his early twenties, and left no issue. But his brother, and successor, the first Shapland Carew, occupies an important place in the family history, and seems to have succeeded in combining his position as a landed proprietor with the legal career for which he had originally been intended. Consequently it is as Counsellor Carew that the accounts show many of the expenses connected with his various activities—the upkeep of Woodstown and Castleboro, the sloop "Dorothy," elections,[4] etc.—right up to the time of his death in 1780. Like other members of his family, he, too, married an heiress, Dorothy, the daughter of Isaac Dobson. Though not a matter of importance, it is possible that she was really his second wife, for there are some references to the death of "my father-in-law," Thomas Ivie, in the miscellaneous papers. Moreover, it is obvious from the accounts that various members of the Ivie family were entrusted with many duties about the estate—presumably owing to his frequent absences in Dublin. Interesting and valuable as is most of the information about the internal economy of the Castleboro and Woodstown households, yet it is often the more intimate items which have the greater appeal. Entries such as that for Shapland's sister "30 May 1747. Mrs. Paul for Christening money 2½ guineas," or "a Pillion for Mrs. Carew 14/3½," are delightfully human touches amidst the mass of references to supplies of slates, nails, mutton, beef, etc. Even more attractive, perhaps, are the details which incidentally record the progress of Shapland's children. Thus in Oct. and Nov. 1753 it was necessary to expend 9d. on a pair of shoes and 8d. on an ivory comb—both expressly for the use of "Master Bob Carew" then about a year old. Later it was a case of "mending a gun for Master Carew 2/8½," whilst in 1774 "Mr. Carew Junior" had to be provided with £106 15s. 0d. "when going to the Temple." There are also a good many references to the daughters. For instance, in 1752, some Lisbon wine at 1/4 was bought for Miss Carew (i.e., Elizabeth, later Mrs. Power) and in 1753 there was milk at 3/11 for "Miss Nelly when she was sick"—Miss Nelly being the second daughter Eleanor, who married Sir John Newport, Bart., of Kilkenny. "Colouring Gloves" for Miss Dolly, afterwards Mrs. Boyse of Bannow, cost 2/2 in 1772, whilst for Mary, who married William Morris of Wexford, there were purchases of a saddle at £3 8s. 3d. in 1779, and linen and lawn at £5 2s. 10d. in 1780. It is only the youngest daughter Sarah Dobson, who became Mrs. Creagh of Laurentinum, Co. Cork, who is not specifically mentioned at all.

Shapland Carew was succeeded by his only son, the first Robert Shapland Carew of the pedigree, and the "Master Bob" referred to above. But as the volume of household accounts ends in 1782, i.e., soon after his father's death, that source of information unfortunately ceases. However, it is clear from entries dated 1781 and 1782 in the books of rentals, that his personal interest in the property at least extended to making a general check on the state of the leases, etc.,

[4] Thus the payment of £1 2s. 9d. on 14th Dec. 1769 to "the Bell ringers for the happy event of 12th inst" marks the culmination of many expenses connected with the Waterford election. In Sleater's Public Gazeteer for 16th Dec., 1769, it is noted as follows: "Shapland Carew, Esq., is duly elected a citizen to serve in this present parliament for the city of Waterford."

when first coming into possession of the estate, whilst other references show that the duty of providing the marriage portion of at least one of his sisters—Mary[5]—naturally devolved on him. Like his father and grandfather he advanced the family fortunes by a suitable alliance, his marriage with Anne, daughter and heiress of the Rev. Richard Pigott, of Dysart in Queen's Co., taking place in 1783. Like his father, too, he took an active part in politics, being re-elected several times in succession for Waterford City from 1776–1800 and after the Union for Co. Wexford from 1806–7 and from 1812–1820. Thus, since his political career coincided with the troublous period of the Union, he is probably best remembered[6] for his refusal of all bribes and for having resolutely voted against it. He died at the age of 77 in the year 1829, and such few papers[7] as relate to his son are prior to that date. One, however, is a copy of the marriage license between this second Robert Shapland Carew and Jane Catherine Cliff, dated 1816, and there are also bills which indicate that jewellery amounting to over £1,400 was purchased in London for the young wife in 1817 and 1819. Very possibly the second gift was to celebrate the birth of a son and heir in 1818—the third Robert Shapland Carew—and there are two undated letters to this young Robert when at Eton, from his sisters Anne Dorothea and Jane, giving news of his aunt Elizabeth Blacker and cousins at Woodbrook, and such family matters as gathering acorns "for Papa," the new lamp in the drawing-room, and the new bath, etc. But if the first Robert Shapland Carew thus lived to see most of his grandchildren, he did not see the climax achieved by his son's elevation to the Irish peerage as Baron Carew of Wexford in 1834, and as Baron Carew of Castleboro in the peerage of the United Kingdom in 1838—with which reference this account may well close since these papers are not directly concerned with the later history of the family.[8]

I. Of the four books of Rentals, the first (1A.41.49) is in many ways the most interesting, and though it only covers the period 1740–58, the first section, which deals with the Co. Wexford estates, gives rather more regular information as to payments, than any of the others. Details of these, have of course, been summarized, but where these included various allowances for building houses, drawing lime, labour, ditching, fencing, or supplies in kind such as honey, etc., the fact has been duly noted. Indeed the comparative frequency of the provisions for lime—which according to contemporary authorities had to be brought either from New Ross or Carlow—seems to indicate that Shapland Carew had some understanding of its agricultural value. Many of the additional remarks about the tenancies were obviously made by him, and the loose sheet of paper dated 26th April, 1753, shows that he arranged for a proper division of the turf bog at Killegney amongst the neighbouring farms. It may also be noted that the majority of entries in this volume refer to the Killegney-

[8] Much of the land was sold under the Acts of 1903 and 1905.

Chapel area, i.e., holdings in the townlands of Ballyboro, Colaght, Coolnacon, Forrestalstown, Killegney, Knockstown, Polpeasty, Tinknock, Tominearly and Ballymackesy, Ballinclay, Chapel, Clonroche, Raheen and Tomfarney, respectively, and that the rates varied very considerably. Save for a few instances of serious arrears by the year 1758, payments were fairly regularly maintained, most of the leases being for periods of 18 or 21 years, or for three lives.

The second part of this book dealing with the City and County of Waterford holdings requires little comment as relatively few particulars are given, and most of the rents, especially those in the city, were for small amounts. One of the very few ejectment notices, however, occurs in connection with " The Lot in St. John's Lane, Waterford " when there was a bill of costs for £9 4s. 4d. and Sheriff's expenses of £2 10s. 0d.

The second volume (1A.41.50) entitled " County Wexford Rentall " should be read in conjunction with the first half of 1A.41.49, for, as the title suggests, it takes up the history of most of the Co. Wexford holdings between the years 1780-98. Actually it is more a memorandum of leases than a real rental, details of payments being only spasmodically recorded. Consequently there are fewer specific references to allowances for lime, labour, etc., although " duties " such as fat hogs and pullets, etc., to be produced in addition to the rent, are mentioned more often, Again there are special notes about changes in the tenancies and other matters, many being dated 1780 and 1781 and obviously made by the first R. S. Carew himself, but there are no very striking changes in conditions or rates. The inclusion of new names, e.g., at Edermine, Ballynahown and Wheelagower, however, suggests that more land was acquired near Enniscorthy in the interval between these records—1758–80.

The third volume (1A.41.52) is of a more miscellaneous character, and it is really only to the first section that its title " County and City of Waterford Rental " applies. Consequently this portion forms a sequel to the second part of 1A.41.49 and though it only gives details of payments for the year 1780–81, there are notes made in 1816 by the first R. S. Carew that bring the main changes in tenancies up to that date The second portion seems to have been used purely as a memorandum book, c. 1814–20, for recording various bonds, loans, etc., and many of the entries are very heavily erased. Of the loose papers included in the volume—mostly receipts and notes of expenses—the most obviously interesting, such as two blacksmiths' bills and some accounts of miscellaneous expenses, have been given in full.

The fourth volume, 1A.41.51, again deals only with the Co. Wexford estates, but the information contained therein is fortunately by no means so limited in date as the title " Rental 1809 " might imply. In actual fact it links up fairly well with the second volume of 1780–98, and though the record of payments and allowances for work, etc., refers principally to the years 1811–13, there are notes showing any arrears then due, and in most cases further notes as to the state of arrears in the years 1821–22. Apart from these entries it is again more a memorandum book about the leases, with various remarks on changes in holdings, tenants, etc., made by the first R. S. Carew in 1819–22, and in a few later instances, 1829, etc., probably by his son, the first Baron. There are several factors, however, which help to make this record of particular interest and especially when studied along with the first and second volumes—the recurrence of so many of the same family names in certain holdings, the great rise in the value of land as represented by the greatly increased rent charges compared with those of 1740, and the number of cases where " duties " in labour or in kind, or a money equivalent, were imposed in addition to the rent. Moreover, the date of commencement is mentioned for many of the leases, and though some refer back to 1788, 1789 or 1794 and 1795, the majority are from 1806, 1811 and 1812. Since the usual period was still for three lives, as earlier, with few tenures for one life only, or " at will," considerable stability is thereby implied, and more than might be expected in such a district so soon after the rising of 1798. Payments too, seem to have been well maintained, the average of arrears noted in 1823 being comparatively small, whilst some of the largest amounts, for example at Cloheden, are marked as "forgiven " in 1823 and 1824. Finally the last page of this volume supplies a summary of the rents charged on the total holdings in each townland of the Co. Wexford estate. This amounts to £5,595 16s. 3½d.—a rather amazing sum considering the relative value of money in the first decade of the 19th century, and the small size of many of the holdings. Unfortunately, however, no figure is supplied to show the total acreage involved, and as the full details of some tenancies are missing, no exact calculation can be made from the rental itself. But as it is unlikely that any large acreages were omitted, and as the approximate estimate nearly amounts to 6,500 acres, that figure may safely be taken as fairly correct.

It is regrettable that Arthur Young's Irish Tour of 1776–79 did not include either Castleboro itself or indeed any part of the Barony of Bantry, for his remarks would surely have been illuminating. What he has to say on the baronies of Forth and Bargy, through which he did travel, is only directly applicable to a few of the Carew holdings mentioned here. Several other outside sources of information may, however, be noted :—Wakefield's Account of Ireland, Statistical and Political c. 1812 ; the report by the Rev. James Bentley Gordon[9] on the parishes of Killegney and Chapel in the first volume of William Shaw Mason's Statistical Account or Parochial Survey of Ireland, printed in 1814 ; the Irish Tourist of 1815 by A. Atkinson and the Banks of the Boro by Patrick Kennedy, written in 1856, but relating to the years 1817–18. Obviously none of these men were such skilled agriculturalists as Young, but since they were contemporary witnesses, their views—often disconcertingly divergent—are not without interest. Thus Gordon considered that conditions on the " 500 acre demesne " were bad, the rents oppressive and the " duties " already referred to, outrageous. But in fairness it should be added that Gordon may have been influenced by his difference of opinion with Carew on the subject of tithes. Anyway Atkinson maintained that the report was maliciously inaccurate in some respects, whilst Wakefield only refers to the rise in rents and praises the custom of making the material for the "big house" on the estate itself. Kennedy, however, has something to say about agents who kept accounts badly or extracted "duties", unfairly. Nevertheless his memories of the Boro neighbourhood, perhaps mellowed by time, are of a reasonably happy farming community and of the friendly relations between the countryside and the inmates of Castleboro.

II. The volume, 1A.41.55, which is described on its cover as "An old Account Book of R. S. Carew's," might, with more accuracy, have been attributed to John Ivie, for the first 22 pages record his dealings with other families, and it is not until page 23 that the Carew references really start. That Shapland Carew may have been connected to the Ivie's by an early marriage has already been suggested, that John, and later Henry Ivie were trusted employees, is sufficiently obvious from this record itself, though a brief explanation of the arrangement of the account may help to make the contents more interesting. Thus it should be noted that from 1746 to 1765 there are really two separate, but concurrent sets of entries, one for Mrs. Elizabeth Mutlow at Woodstown, the other for her son, Shapland Carew at Castleboro. After Mrs. Mutlow's death in 1765, Shapland came into full possession of Woodstown as well, and the accounts are combined, whilst the rents from Knockavelish and Harristown, previously reserved to Mrs. Mutlow, were divided between Shapland and his brother, Thomas, in accordance with the "Memorial" of 1729. As Shapland's death did not take place till 1780, it is only the entries for the last two years that are in the first Robert Shapland Carew's name.

Little comment is needed on the details of these accounts, since much must depend on the particular interests of the individual reader and the information about contemporary prices covers a sufficiently large number of commodities to suit almost all tastes. Attention has already been drawn to a few of the family items and there are many others, whilst the general references range from the heavy expenses connected with the sloop "Dorothy" to ounces of lettuce and cauliflower seed, weeders for the gardens, peas for the pigeons, grease for the carts, crocks for butter, sending messengers with fish to Castleboro, or the cost of sweeping the chimneys at Woodstown.

III. This miscellaneous section consists of three volumes and several bundles of loose documents and letters. Actually the earliest in date is the memorandum book, 1A.41.54, containing entries of sums of money discharged by Henry Archer between 1672–77 at one end, and notes of wages and other matters 1704–27, at the other end. There are also interesting lists under the headings "Plat sent into Ingland befor breach of the boyn"; "To what putter in the hows 1704"; and "To what Lining and peter when Marey began hir sarvis May 1717." Much is heavily cancelled, however, and almost illegible, but from the references to "Elen" Shapland it seems certain that it mainly refers to the original Shapland household and came into the possession of Mrs. Elizabeth Carew as executrix to her Mother's will

Such few pages as were ever used in the book 1A.41.53, also refer to servants' wages, c. 1780, but this time they obviously relate to the Carew estate as there are notes on two small legacies left by Shapland Carew and paid by his son in the October of 1780.[10]

Since the greater part of 1A.41.48 is taken up with legal material—an abridgement of Blackstone with emendations—it probably belonged to Counsellor Shapland Carew, the last eight pages only, being utilised at a later date to record some rents at Dysart (where the first R. S. Carew's father-in-law lived) from 1798–1809.

Finally there are the bundles of loose documents that are all classed together under the reference number 1A.41.56. These mostly consist of receipts for rents, payments in kind or labour, various accounts, bills, bonds and letters, and date from about 1740–1830. The more obviously important have been given in full, or at least summarised, and these include a number which have already been referred to. Other items of interest are :—A list of plate "left at Castleboro the 3rd of March, 1780" and so made shortly before Shapland Carew's death; the warrant showing that John Mutlow (Mrs. Elizabeth Carew's second husband) was appointed Lieutenant of a Troop of Dragoons in the Co. Waterford militia in 1715; certificate of registration of larch and scotch fir trees planted at Courtnacuddy, Co. Wexford, by the second R. S. Carew in 1819 and another certificate for beech, larch, red spruce, ash and fir trees planted at Ballymackesy by the Rev. James Gordon in 1806.

In conclusion I wish gratefully to acknowledge the help received from my husband, Mr. H. G. Leask, especially in preparing the map; also to Mr. E. R. Richards Orpen of Monksgrange for valuable local information, and to Miss Mary Davoren and Mr. Robert Simington for some useful suggestions.

The Petition of the Widow Hannen most humbly Sheweth that petitioner and her great ancestors were born and died on the Estate of Robert Shapland Carew Esq. that from Generation to Generation the honorable Family of the Carews never encreased the Rent upon petitioners family and now the Lease which Petitioner holds from Robert Carew Esq. is nearly expired and she most humbly rests her hopes upon the consummate honor of Robert Carew Esq. that he will be humanly inclining to grant a Renewal of the said Lease to support her six orphan children for which Petitioner and Orphans shall during life as in duty bound ever Pray.

INDEX OF PERSONS

ABBREVIATIONS.

bar.=barony
c.=circa co.=county
dau.=daughter prob.=probably m.=married.

The names of towns, counties and baronies of frequent occurrence have been abbreviated in such forms as Kild., Kilk., Lim., Shelm., Shelb., Tipp., Wat., Wex., Wick., for Kildare, Kilkenny, Limerick, Shelmaliere, Shelburne, Tipperary, Waterford, Wexford and Wicklow respectively.

N.B. 1. Where identification was certain, all names of places have been indexed under their modern spelling, as given in the official Index of Townlands. Such variants of these as occur in the text have been noted after the modern equivalent, but have only been repeated in their appropriate alphabetical position when the divergence in spelling made this seem desirable.

2. As a general rule references to pages 1-78 apply mainly to localities, denominations of land, names of lessees and of the lives during which tenures were held ; pages 79-82 contain names of persons and places connected with the accounts for Woodstown and Castleboro, whilst the references to the miscellaneous section, pages 183–207, are of an obviously varied character.

3. Members of the Carew family who appear only in the pedigree, p. 210, and are not mentioned elsewhere, are not included in this Index.
